RINGING KEYNOTE SPEECH

Talks to Men, Not Partisans—Takes New Views of Old Party Doctrines—Assumes Leadership.

Sea-Girt, N. J., August 7.—Governor Woodrow Wilson, in formally accepting the nomination of the Democratic party as its candidate for President, today raised the tariff issue to paramount interest in the coming fight for free and progressive government, in an address notable alike as a straightforward exposition of the issues confronting the nation and as a measure of the breadth of sympathy and strength of sincere conviction of the Democratic standard-bearer.

It was in a new spirit, in a new manner of speech for such occasions, and by a new type of leader, that the first keynote of the Democratic campaign was sounded. Time-worn appeals to party feeling and play upon outgrown prejudices were lacking from first to last. Today's message was to men, and not to partisans. Yet through it all ran the old familiar Democratic doctrines and the honored Jeffersonian traditions.

Governor Wilson's address was an appeal for the "rule of right and justice," not in a spirit of passion and anger, but in soberness and after common counsel. To the tariff, the Trust problem, the currency question, matters affecting those who do the daily work of America, to our policy in the Philippine Islands, to questions of conservation, both material and human resources, he applied the yardstick of sound morals and sound logic, and through every difficulty, without faltering, found the path that led to national progress, righteousness and justice.

For "Unhesitating Revision." Common counsel, and not private arrangement; public discussion, and not secret scheming; distribution of burdens and of powers, and of rights throughout the nation, and not into the hands of an exploiting and selfish minority—these are watchwords of the remedies he proposes. Because the tariff is the first and most far-reaching of all the special privileges which have clogged the channels of free government, he addressed himself most earnestly to that problem, demanding that the tariff schedules be revised "unhesitatingly and steadily downward," beginning with the schedules that have most obviously been used to kill competition and to raise prices, and extending to every item which affords opportunity for monopoly or special advantage to any interest whatsoever.

HEAR BERRY

At Ratification Meeting on Public Square on August 17.

The Democrats and others who had the privilege of hearing the address of Hon. William H. Berry delivered here during the campaign which resulted in his election as State Treasurer some years ago, are greatly pleased with the opportunity afforded of hearing him again at the Ratification Meeting, Saturday, August 17. His speech on that occasion was pronounced by many as the best political address they had ever heard. All remember the startling disclosures which followed his election and the enormous sums of money which had disappeared in connection with the building of the capitol. By his heroic course in standing by the taxpayers of the state during his term as State Treasurer, he saved the people of the state millions of dollars, and sent to prison many of the guilty ones. He stood up for the people in the face of the positive statement by a Republican Governor that there was nothing wrong and a subservient Attorney General who denounced Mr. Berry and insisted that he was not playing fair. His every statement was verified by the investigation and trial of those who were responsible for the enormous graft and his course met with such wide approval on the part of the taxpayers of the state, that two years ago they disregarded party ties and party alliances and elected him Governor; but the people have been deprived of his valuable services in that office by reason of the manipulation of the count in Philadelphia, through corrupt election officials under the corrupt control of the Penrose gang.

The indications are that the meeting will be largely attended. Wilson, Marshall and Berry by their records in public office demonstrate what honest officials can accomplish and we think you cannot better spend the day than to be at the meeting at 1 o'clock on the public square.

HECKERMAN LETTER

Meets Former Bedford Countians in Tennessee.

Bristol, Tenn., August 5, 1912.

The writer has just returned from Newport, Tenn., where there is one of the largest canning factories in the United States. It is owned and operated by Stokely Brothers. This company is now running its plant at its full capacity and several hundred men and women find employment there. There is no doubt about its being the biggest establishment of its kind and its capacity, it seems to me, has not seen its end. The busy season is just beginning and it is a great curiosity to the many visitors to see the hundred or more women husking corn, stringing beans, taking the skins off of the tomatoes, etc. The canning of berries of different kinds is also being done.

This building was formerly used as a cotton mill. The Stokely Brothers bought it and placed therein machinery of the most approved type for their business. They also reinforced all the floors. This, however, was done last year. Now they are all as busy as bees in a tar barrel, canning, especially sweet corn. Several hundred acres of this one article having been planted for their use this year.

At the present time they are canning each day about 800 bushels. One man told me that he was hauling 240 bushels from his farm daily and that the farm was eleven miles distant; others haul even further than this.

The new pike roads coming in help them in the delivery of this corn. The tomato season is hardly here, but in another week as many as two hundred women will be employed in peeling the tomatoes. Formerly, all the canning was done by small canneries. I have heretofore described the way that was done. There are still thousands of these small canneries scattered through the south.

This firm has a canning factory at Cleveland, Tenn., where they devote their efforts to putting up peaches, as that is in a large peach belt. A very large silo has just been completed by these enterprising men and it is being packed daily with finely ground corn cobs and the green husks. It is calculated that this will furnish food for the stock on many of the farms that are owned by the firm next winter. Nothing goes to waste here. The tomato skins and cores are worked into catsup, which, just now, is being put into barrels.

A sister of these gentlemen has started a day nursery in a large building near the factory. She has hired a woman to look after the babies and while this nursery has been open a very short time, yet the day I was there she had eighteen. Were it not for this, the mothers could not work in the factory, because they could not leave the children. These day nurseries are common in the north but not so down this way.

I saw Dr. Metzger a few days ago. Preston is well and he tells me the junior members of the family are all well.

I had a most splendid dinner at the Russell Hotel, Jonesboro, the other day. It was a regular Pennsylvania feed prepared by Mrs. Russell and her good mother. Why, dem noodles and dat chicken gravy were both made, as Aunt Polly Weiss taught her daughter Mary to make them. I had invited Tom Fetter and his wife to dine with me. They were not on hand, however, being too busy harvesting and trying to catch the person who, not long since, entered their house and stole some money and a couple fine big hams. I have not heard the particulars as to the robbery.

A couple of months ago I wrote you about the intended Old Home Week celebration that Jonesboro, Tenn., intended having. Only ten days ago they had a meeting and appointed a committee to generalize things. At the same time they borrowed a souvenir book of Bedford's Old Home Week to see how we did it so royally. I hope they will return the book to its owner. Now this home-coming week is to be the middle of August and they have not as yet done anything by way of sending invitations to those living away off.

The rain hereabouts has injured the hay very much and I am told has worked detriment to all growing crops, except the weeds. We have had a few very cold nights lately; in fact, they have made one feel as if fall is coming.

I have been on the jump lately. Sold this week 690 cases of Fort Bedford P-nuts or 690,000 packages, besides a goodly share of other products from the factory across the creek. I am homeward bound now.

Yours truly,
M. P. Heckerman.

PARTY OF TWENTY TO VISIT PANAMA CANAL

Splendid Vacation Trip Planned for Guests of The Pittsburgh Post.

More than 30 years ago a Frenchman first conceived the idea of building a ship canal across the Isthmus of Panama, so that commerce might flow in one uninterrupted stream from ocean to ocean.

Today, it is but the wait of one short year when the dream of his ambitious mind shall have been realized, even exceeded. The most stupendous engineering feat in the world's history will soon be a living actuality. Yet it remained for American brains, American brawn and American skill to accomplish it. The time to visit this epoch-marking work is right now. As soon as the water is turned in the vastness and the marks of battle of the place will be obliterated, and that will occur very soon.

The 20 guests of The Pittsburgh Post will see the Panama Canal in its most interesting stage of construction. Besides, the itinerary includes Jamaica, Cuba and Costa Rica, one of the most wonderful tours ever sponsored by a newspaper. You can be one of the party. Watch The Pittsburgh Post for detailed announcements about these great free tours, to be awarded without absolutely one cent of cost to the lucky persons.

The Great Kidney Remedy Convinces the Most Skeptical

I want to tell you what Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root did for me. I was completely broken down. My kidneys hurt me so that when I was down, I could not get up unless I took hold of something to pull myself up with.

I tried different kinds of kidney pills, but they did me no good. Someone told me to try Swamp-Root. I had no faith in it but to please my wife, I purchased one bottle and took it. I saw it was beginning to help me and kept on taking it until I had taken six bottles and it straightened me out all right.

Swamp-Root is the only medicine that did me any good. I thought I would write this letter and tell everyone that is afflicted as I was, to take Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. The six bottles I took cost me five dollars, and did me five hundred dollars' worth of good.

Yours very truly,

Outing for August

The vacation number of Outing contains a golf article by Harold H. Hilton—of international fame, a discussion by Dillon Wallace of the proper equipment for canoe cruising, and an article upon the relative advantages of the yawl, ketch and schooner rigs for small craft by Herbert L. Stone.

Stories of the real outdoors by Nevil Henshaw and Frank H. Crawford and Hulbert Footner's account of the "Unexplored Rivers in the North" are in keeping with the season.

Our agricultural friends will welcome another article from the pen of E. P. Powell, "Roses and Their Relative." The home life of our game birds is interestingly portrayed by J. Alden Loring in an article fully illustrated with photographs. Harold Whiting Slauson tells us about the workings of the 2-cycle automobile and marine motor with special reference to the new Diesel type engine.

Fishing and tennis articles, the story of the Bull Terrier as Williams Haynes, and the usual selection of excellent photographs and illustrations are further attractions.

Hay fever and asthma make August a month of intense suffering to many people. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives prompt ease and relief, and is soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes. William M. Merthwe, N. Searsport, Me., says: "A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound relieved me of a severe attack of asthma and less than a bottle caused a complete cure." FOREST CONSERVATION

An Interesting Article by John Lutz, Esq., of Bedford.

The following article from the April number of the Pennsylvania Sportsman is of interest:

The Sportsman is published "in the interest of Fish, Game and Forest Conservation." Would it not be wise just now to put forest conservation first in order? Without the forest we cannot conserve the game; the forest conserves the water and without the water we can have no fish. Though the forest has hitherto received but little attention, it really stands first and foremost in importance, and we must care for our forests as the very first step toward preserving our game, water and fish. There is an immediate and pressing necessity for some effective measures to preserve as much as possible of what remains of the forests of our state. For this purpose the entire body of "United Sportsmen of Pennsylvania" should at once begin an active and energetic campaign. The Allegheny Mountain and its foot hills, extending from the Maryland line, on the south, to the New York line on the north, and from the Laurel Hill west of the main ridge of the Allegheny to the Big Cove or Tuscarora mountain on the east, embrace much the larger part of the present timbered area of the state and constitute its principal water sheds. Almost this entire region consists of steep mountain ridges, with fertile valleys between. The slopes of nearly all these ridges are still covered with timber and are too steep and rugged to ever become profitable farming lands. They are the sources of nearly all our streams and within their bounds are found about all the game birds and animals of the state. This same region also contains nearly all the trout streams of the state.

In every part of this timbered region the insatiable steam saw-mills are at work throughout the year. Unless prompt and effective measures are taken to secure at least the untillable portions of this territory for permanent forest reservations, the opportunity will soon be past and the state will suffer a great and irreparable loss.

Nearly all this land can still be purchased at a comparatively low price and the state has abundant funds to meet the expense. If we can spend $50,000,000 on state roads, the need of which is not half so urgent, we can certainly spend $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 to preserve a great forest reservation, that shall not only be a credit to our state but also a source of revenue for generations to come. It is yet possible to secure and preserve, in this mountain region, a great forest reservation, that, in the territory east of the Mississippi, shall be second only to the famous Adirondack reservation in New York. If it is to be done at all, however, it must be done quickly. The time is short—the lumberman and his saw-mill are at the work of destruction every hour of the day—there is no sentimentality or care for the future about them—they see only the almighty dollar and they are chasing it at a furious pace every day in the year.

The friends of conservation should lose no time. The good work should be entered upon at once and pushed with all possible energy. A new legislature is to be elected this year and our Organization can do efficient service in securing the nomination and election of Senators and Representatives favorable to the enactment of the necessary legislation, and the inauguration of effective measures for the early accomplishment of this important work. In order to make more secure the success of our efforts we may well go a little further and endeavor to impress our Congressmen with the importance of this matter to the state, so that in case the Legislature fails to act or should regard the project as too expensive for the state, we may be able to get a part of this forest region included in the proposed National Appalachian Park Reservation, the plans for which do not at present include any part of the Allegheny Mountain region in this state. What say ye, Pennsylvania Sportsmen! Shall we not make a united and persevering effort to bring about the early consummation of this splendid enterprise, of which, if accomplished, our state may well be proud for all time to come?

WASHINGTON LETTER

A Question for Protectionists—Brown Sugar's Disappearance.

Washington, August 5.—The Republican platform reluctantly admits that there has been an increase in the cost of living in the United States, but seeks to exonerate our system of excessive protection with the statement that prices have increased all over the world. This is true, but it is also true that the increase has been more than twice as great in this country, under Payne-Aldrichism, than in free trade Great Britain.

Here is a query that every protectionist in the land is invited to answer: The United States official reports show that the average wholesale price of sugar in London averaged two cents per pound less during the last two years than in New York. The Payne-Aldrich tax on sugar is approximately two cents per pound. In England, sugar goes untaxed. If the difference in price in the two countries is not due to the tariff on sugar, to what cause is it due?

Why Brown Sugar Disappeared

Perhaps you have noticed that the old-fashioned brown sugar, like our mothers used to cook with, has practically disappeared from the market.

There is a reason. This reason consists of a "joker" in the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, in the form of a color test known as "Dutch Standard No. 16." When this test was fixed it meant the barring out of the old-fashioned brown sugar, cheap and good, and that is why this brand of sugar has disappeared from the market. Whenever a tariff bill is in the making the agents of the sugar trust are on hand to see that the "Dutch Standard" is maintained, and they had no difficulty in getting the makers of the Payne-Aldrich law to accede to their wishes.

Trusts Thrive Under Tariff

John Moody, editor of Moody's magazine, and perhaps the greatest financial authority in this country, has prepared the following table which shows how the trusts have increased in number and capitalization under the present system of excessive protection:

At the close of	No. of trusts	Capitalization
1898	48	$1,679,582,500
1900	98	3,249,001,061
1902	136	5,743,741,560
1904	153	6,576,918,500
1906	178	7,284,780,760
1908	194	7,506,004,000
1910	206	7,706,621,100
1911	224	8,066,290,861

Mr. Moody says that 25 per cent. of all trust capitalization in this country represents actual investment, and that the remaining 75 per cent. represents water.

Dear Sir: I have known for over 40 years of the effects of Wilson's Remedy (Wilson's Preparation of Hypophosphites and Bloodgett) in cases of pulmonary troubles. At this point I will say to you what you have not before known of; that 44 years since, while I was a resident of N. Y. City, I was severely ill with lung trouble. Physicians said I was a consumptive and my family physician told my wife that he thought I could not recover. My attention was directed to the Wilson Remedy, which I used with splendid effect. I have been on my feet and at work ever since my cure. Yours truly,

REV. CHAS. SAGER,

Pastor M. E. Church, Hunter, (Greene Co.) N. Y.

A WOMAN
SAVED HIM

By ELLEN INGERSOLL

Fred Grigsby was a clerk in a bank in Montreal, Canada. Being in bad health he longed for a trip, but having no means laid up he could not afford to take one. The president of the bank in which he was employed liked him and set his wits to work to arrange an outing for him. One day he called the young man into his private office and said to him:

"One of the bank's customers owes some money to a Spaniard named Juarez, living in an out of the way place
on the northern coast of South America. There is no bank near the creditor through which the debt can be discharged. Juarez is a mean, tricky old fellow, and Hardwick, the debtor, feels that the only way in the matter
is to send some one there with the exact amount in gold to pay the debt and take a receipt. Thinking it a chance for you to get a change of scene, I have suggested that you would go and attend to the matter without charge if your expenses were paid. The winter
you dread is coming on here, while it is warm down there. You will get a sea voyage out and back. What do you say?"

Grigsby jumped at the offer. He was provided with a box containing eagles, half eagles and double eagles to the amount of $6,000, which was put in his stateroom on the ship just before she sailed. He was also furnished with a statement of the account and all necessary papers. The box contained the exact amount due to be paid.

On the ship with Grigsby was a recent graduate of a woman's college on her way to Honduras, where she had accepted a position of teacher of mathematics and physics. Seeing that Grigsby was not well, she was very kind to him, entertaining and cheering
him. Grigsby, who had a way of saying what he meant instead of smoothing things, was much opposed to the present movement in woman's status.
He regretted that women should occupy positions formerly occupied by men only. He was opposed to a collegiate education for them and preferred to see them taking care of homes.

"Women," he said, "haven't the same kind of brain as men. They're not fitted to take hold of problems as men are and work them out."

"If you should get into a scrape would you rely most on a woman or a man to help you out?" asked Miss Boyd.

"If my getting out depended on fooling some one I would prefer a woman
if it depended on proving facts I would only rely on a man."

Miss Boyd admitted that she would rather follow nature's law—marriage—
but since she couldn't wait for a man
she would be pleased to marry to her come along and offer himself to her she must be doing something for herself.

When they reached Honduras Grigsby found Juarez, who came from the interior to meet him. The Spaniard was more disagreeable than he had been represented. After the payment
had been made he counted the money,
and, finding the amount correct, he signed a receipt, not for $6,000 in gold, but for so many pounds, as stated in the invoice that had been made out in Montreal. After giving Grigsby the receipt he said that he would have the gold weighed. To Grigsby's astonishment it was short in weight. Then the old rascal had Grigsby arrested for purloining some of the gold.

The young man was not only distressed, but puzzled. The gold had been boxed and sealed ever since it had left the bank, and he could not see any possible way for the shortage to have occurred. Nevertheless he had seen it weighed himself, and the weight was enough short of the figures on the invoice to make a considerable difference in funds.

There was nothing for Grigsby to do but stand trial, and, there being no way for him to prove that he had not taken from the coins by acid application, filing or other means an amount of gold equal to the deficiency, it was impossible for him to escape a term in prison.

He did not meet Miss Boyd after they landed till he saw her sitting among the spectators in the courtroom at his trial. He was about to be convicted when she arose and asked to be put on the stand. Her evidence was given direct, without her being questioned by an attorney.

"I will explain," she said, "why the gold weighs less here than when it left Montreal, though the amount in dollars is the same. Weight varies with the centrifugal force caused by the rotation of the earth. This force is greater at the equator than at any point between the equator and the poles. That is, any substance is lighter here than in Montreal."

Juarez's case fell to the ground.
Grigsby was acquitted and left the courtroom with the woman who had
saved him.

"I believe I said to you," he remarked, "on our voyage here that if in trouble I would rely on a man more than a woman to save me in a matter of fact. My position has been abundantly disproved. Among a hundred men, more or less, who have known of my peril not one had the knowledge to explain the deficiency in the weight of the gold. For this I am indebted to you. I retract all I said. Hereafter I shall be a devoted supporter of women's colleges."

MOTHER'S FLOWERS.

My thoughts go back to the days of old.
To those days on the old homestead,
Where the air was sweet with roses' breath
And fragrance blossoms shed;

Where honeysuckle climbed around the porch
And hollyhocks raised their heads
And forget-me-nots and lilies white
Smiled from the garden bed.

Sweet Williams and fuchsias and bleeding hearts
And poppies and cockscomb, too,
And myrtle, geraniums and heliotrope
In that old garden grew.

How often I sat by those flowers so sweet
While the bees around me flew,
While the birds in the trees were singing
their glees
And the butterflies fluttered down too!

Those flowers could speak; I am sure they all smiled
As I sat by their side in the sun.
And the birds and the bees and the squirrels in the trees
And myself were all happy and one.

But mother is gone, and her flowers are dead.
Those dear smiling flowers of yore,
And the homestead so old is turning to mold,
And the rosebush is dead by the door.

But in my old heart those flowers still grow—
They bloom where no frosts ever blight.
Sweet springtime may come, the summer
may go,
Yet their fragrance will ever delight.

BREAKING THE BROODY.

The maternal instinct is the strongest of a hen's nature, and to pull out her tail or duck her in the trough can't cool her hatching fever. Violence
here is cruelty and foolhardy.
Bughouse, bulldog tactics don't pay,
and the more kindly we treat the broody the sooner she will lay. There are easy ways to stop broodiness.
Many use an all slat cock, hung up so the air blows through it. In this the hen gets ventilated, and the air cools
her hatching fever. Placed in a room without nesting place or in a yard with a lively cockerel, Biddy often quickly gets over her spell. We have broken broodies in a day by simply tying a red flannel streamer to their tails. In trying to run away from the fannels her thoughts are changed to another channel. A turkey gobble handy to chase the flannel puts on an extra finish and furnishes the laugh of a lifetime. By breaking the broody
she lays more eggs in the cheap season, but she lays fewer high priced winter eggs than the Biddy who is allowed to hatch and raise a Roose-veltian family.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

The august New Jersey assembly,
after great cogitation and solemn consideration, has passed a law laying a tax on "female cats." But what have the mammy cats done—gobbled the chicks or yowled these intellectual giants out of bed? We suggest that this act with a picture of a female felline be inscribed on their tombs as benefactors of the human race.

When ticks get on squabs don't jerk the bugs right off, for the heads will remain in the flesh and kill the bird.
Just touch the bug with benzine and it will come out; then clean up and spray the loft with lime wash strong with crude carbolic acid.

While Mother Hen and her chicks
do not need so close care as the brooder and its incubator chicks, they must have reasonable care or the chicks will die or be inferior. Many get poor results from chicks hatched naturally because they are neglectful. They think nature will offset their careles-ness. But nature, like the Almighty, helps the people who help themselves.

There is not much use for us to try to answer questions in regard to fowls that are sick, dying or dead unless full symptoms are sent and feeding methods are described. An addressed stamped envelope should always be inclosed.

At the death of his wife a Carlisle (Pa.) farmer discovered she had a deposit of over $1,000 in the bank saved
from the sale of eggs, poultry, butter and milk. In Missouri the hen is called the mortgage lifter, but it's the farmer's faithful helpmeet that helps Biddy and Bossy to do wonders.

The bureau of animal industry advises us to give our fowls beef broth
three times a day for fourteen days to fatten them. As beef is so much higher than chicken meat we ask our Washington experts if it wouldn't pay better to feed chick broth.

When a setting of eggs arrives, unbroken, packed in a neat receptacle that is light, but strong, and when these same eggs hatch a good percentage of lively big chicks, true to name,
the sender not only tickles his customer, but holds his trade and gains more.

Two Stillwell (Okla.) farmers went to law over a turkey hen, and ten little poulters, and it cost the one who brought suit only $92.65. That's paying a whole lot for eleven turkeys the other fellow got.

If you think the day of miracles has passed go advertise in an up to date paper. If you are down in the mouth
because trade is dull, go advertise.
Your trade will quickly pick up and the corners of your mouth turn up.

A woman writer remarks, "Of the different varieties of poultry I have handled ducks seem the most human to me." Now, is this because some humans are quacks or because the females of both species do all the quack-ing?

When a hen flies over into a neighbor's garden there's no end to the trouble she may make. The destruction of one flower bed is worth more than half a dozen hens. We would rather have no chickens than lose the affection and good opinion of our neighbors.

TAKING A CAMERA ABROAD

A Source of Pleasure That May Win
Fine and Imprisonment.

If the American tourist carries his camera to Europe with him he must be careful to avoid photographing persons, private property and particularly government buildings, forts, docks and ships without permission. Many tourists have got themselves into much trouble in this way, especially in Russia, where the restrictions are unusually rigid, and in Germany also.

A few years ago Germany passed a special bill through the reichstag dealing with this matter and imposing heavy penalties upon those who infringe the regulations. Damages to the amount of $1,500, with a fine of $250 or two months' imprisonment,
will be the fate of any one who snapshots a private person, a work of art
or the interior of a private building
and circulates or publishes the picture
without permission.

Persons in the public eye, such as members of the royal family, statesmen, actors and well known divines
are excepted, says a writer in Country Life in America. So, too, are public buildings and works of art in public galleries.

In Italy the camera of the tourist is made a means of providing revenue for that somewhat impoverished country. If you carry your camera when on a visit to Pompeii or others of the recently excavated ruins you may take
as many photographs as you please,
but you are forced to pay a small fee
for each plate exposed.

STATE LOTTERIES.

They Were Once Very Common and Very Popular in Europe.

Lotteries were common in ancient Rome, and during the middle ages lotteries were utilized by the Italian merchants for the disposal of their goods.
Some of the Italian states then adopted
the lottery as a means of raising revenue, and the institution of state lotteries afterward became very common and very popular throughout Europe.

The earliest English state lottery of which there is any record was in 1569,
when 40,000 chances were sold at 10
shillings each, the drawing taking place in the west door of St. Paul's cathedral.

The prizes consisted of articles of plate, and the profits were employed for the repair of certain harbors. Early in the reign of Queen Anne private lotteries were suppressed "as public nuisances," but government lotteries, however, were still maintained, and from 1709 to 1824 considerable sums were annually raised in lotteries authorized by acts of parliament.

The average yearly profit to the government from 1793 to 1824 was over £340,000. On the ground of injury to public morals lotteries of all kinds were abolished in England in 1826.—
London Saturday Review.

Astor's Fearlessness.

John Jacob Astor, who went to his death fearlessly on the Titanic, was always noted for his great personal courage. One of his friends told a story some years ago of the cold blooded bravery of the head of the Astor family. An insane man—or a desperate criminal—met him in Fifth avenue one morning and, stepping close to him, thrust the muzzle of a revolver against Astor's ribs. "From inside me that you will give me $5,000,"
said he. "or I will fire."

Astor glared into his eyes. "Is your old gun cocked?" he asked.

The other man said that it was.

"Then shoot!" he roared.

The other fellow backed away. "I'll get you the next time," he said.

Astor walked on without bothering to turn his head. He did not even repeat the story to the police.

Ancient Dress Still Worn.

In the little town of Munsiedel, in Bavaria, there exists one of the most curious charitable foundations in the world. One of the burghers, Christopher Wanner, died in 1451 and left his fortune for the establishment of a home for aged poor. He attached, however, the condition that every old man who was taken in should wear his beard and the same cut of clothes and cap as he himself used to wear; consequently the ancient pensioners are still to be seen wandering about the streets of Munsiedel in the costumes of the fifteenth century.

A Good Excuse.

Ethel has taken a great dislike to rice, and lately her mother has not offered it to her. The other morning she asked what Ethel would like for breakfast.

"Oh, give me some rice so as I can fuss about it," was her reply.—New York Times

The One Perfect Boy.

"I never heard of but one perfect boy," said Johnny pensively as he sat in the corner doing penance.
"And who was that?" asked mamma.
"Papa—when he was little," was the answer. Then silence reigned for the space of five minutes.—Exchange.

Sound Reasons.

"You seem to be able to draw a great deal of interest from that gentleman."

"Of course I do. He's my principal."

—Baltimore American.

Research.

Bill—Have you done any research work? Jim—Have I? Well, say, I've looked for this same collar button I'm wearing now at least fifty times.—

EVERYONE NEEDS IT

Ed. D. Heckerman is Having a Wonderful Sale of Thompson's Barosma, the Mighty Kidney and Liver Specific.

And no wonder, when he offers to refund your money if it doesn't cure any disease of the kidneys, liver or bladder, backache, sideache, nervousness or any weakness of the kidneys.
But Thompson's Barosma has made
so many almost miraculous cures that Ed. D. Heckerman is pretty certain not to have any returns.

Here are a few instances:
Frank K. Sturges, Sturtevant, Crawford County, Pa., was cured of Bright's disease six years ago and only took six bottles. He has had no bad symptoms since.

"I had kidney trouble and enlargement of the liver and spleen. I took Thompson's Barosma. The first bottle reduced the measurement around my stomach from 45 to 36
inches, and several bottles complet-ly cured me."—M. S. Langworthy, Tyronville, Pa.

After suffering the terrible agony
of rheumatism for ten years, being compelled to use crutches, J. N.
Dunn, Troy Center, Pa., after all hope had left him, and he had no faith in any remedy, took six bottles of Thompson's Barosma, threw away his crutches and went to work for the first time in ten years.

These statements are absolutely true, and the Thompson Medical Co., Titusville, Pa., will prove it. Then why should anyone suffer in the face of such facts? How can they suffer when Ed. D. Heckerman guarantees to refund the money if a cure is not effected? Thompson's Barosma, 50 cents and $1.00 a bottle. All druggists

No Cause to Fear.

A fisherman succeeded in stealing a goose from a farmhouse by unraveling his fish-line along the ground in sight of the goose. The goose, seeing the worm, bit at it and got caught by the hook. When caught, the man ran, pulling the bird after him. The bird, by flapping her wings, alarmed the farmer's wife, who came out to the gate, and, seeing the man running and the goose following, she exclaimed:
"Don't be afraid, my good man; she won't touch you."

Iconoclast Resumes Work.

A Chicago physician has made a translation of an Egyptian papyrus which, it is claimed, dislodges Hippocrates from his place as "father of medicine" by antedating his discoveries some 5,000 years. Even appendicitis, it is asserted, is described in the old papyrus. It now remains for some one to show that Ecclesiastes' dictum,
"There is nothing new under the sun,"
was really written by Pharaoh or Thothmes.

LET US CONSIDER

The most astonishing of the many statements made by Theodore Roosevelt in his "Confession of Faith" before the National Progressive convention at Chicago on Tuesday is contained in the following paragraph:

Whatever I did as President I was able to do only because I had the backing of the people. When on any point I did not have the backing, when on any point I differed from the people, it mattered not whether I was right or whether I was wrong, my power vanished. I tried my best to lead the people, to advise them, to tell them what I thought was right; if necessary, I never hesitated to tell them what I thought they ought to hear, even though I thought it would be unpleasant for them to hear it; but I recognized that my task was to try to lead them and not to drive them, to take them into my confidence, to try to show them that I was right, and then loyally and in good faith to accept their decision.

The intelligent reader, knowing the history of the years when Mr. Roosevelt was the nation's chief executive, might be disposed to take this paragraph as a joke were it not followed, after a few sentences, with the closing sentence, repeated from a former speech, "We stand at Armageddon and we battle for the Lord."

The joke theory eliminated, it is difficult to attribute the statements with regard to his having taken the people into his confidence to anything commendable in the third term candidate. Does he think that all the people have so soon forgotten the acts of his egotism? Does he assume that these statements will be taken at a gulp by an intelligent public fresh in the mind of which are his acts? Can it have been possible that he took the people into his confidence when the Panama zone was secured? Did the people know that American gunboats were on both sides of the Isthmus when William Nelson Cromwell stirred up the revolution which resulted in a section of Colombia being recognized as the Republic of Panama? Did he take the trouble to tell the people that Mr. Cromwell went to Panama with the formal Declaration of Independence in his pocket, already dated? Did the people know anything of and which knocked the props from beneath the Law of Nations? That the people neither knew nor sanctioned is evident from a later speech by the Colonel in which he said, "I took the canal zone," and gave as a reason that if he had consulted Congress "it would be being debated yet."

Again, did the people know anything of his allowing the United States Steel Corporation to swallow up its only real rival, the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, thus forming the most gigantic combination of all history?

Did the people know of and sanction his halting the prosecution of the Santa Fe Railroad for rebating when the crime was traced to Paul Morton, a member of his cabinet?

If the people knew of and sanctioned these and many other mysterious acts of his while he was President it would be interesting to know by what miraculous means he communicated with them.

Did the people know before its writing of the "Dear Harriman" letter which brought from the magnate the huge campaign contribution which is said to have changed 50,000 votes in New York alone?

If the people of this nation were taken into "my confidence" and sanctioned all these acts there exists in this country a sorry state of affairs, but happily the people did not know of nor sanction them, Mr. Roosevelt's statements to the contrary notwithstanding, nor has the lapse of four years caused them to forget.

Constables Win Mileage Case

In the case of Sylvester Ritchey, Constable of East Providence Township, vs. Bedford County, which was a test case brought by Mr. Ritchey in behalf of all the constables of this county to decide their right to mileage for making returns to court, Judge Woods handed down his decision last week in favor of the plaintiff, in which it is decided that constables are entitled to $2.50 and mileage for "attendance on Court and making returns thereto."

WILSON ACCEPTS

"But it should be done gradually," he said, "but not timidly; with due regard to the rights of honest business built up on the false basis of high protection, but with first thought to the needs and rights of the masses whom it taxes." Tariff for revenue only is the ultimate ideal of his plan.

To the tariff, also, he laid, fundamentally, the growth and evils of the Trusts, recognizing, at the same time, that conditions must be faced as they are, and that until undue privileges in the tariff can be removed, at least, the Trusts must be regulated and kept within the law. To this end, he recommended changes in the Sherman Anti-Trust law, and the addition of "civil and criminal processes" where necessary, to make it possible for the government promptly and effectively to control and restrain corporations that would destroy opportunity and equality in industrial fields.

Living's Cost at Tariff's Door

The high cost of living again he traced to the tariff and to the Trusts, in the first instance, and the remedy he found in opening anew the channels of competition and permitting the natural laws of supply and demand to operate unhampered by special privileges to a favored few.

So, through all the issues which have arisen out of the period of industrial combination and concentration, he traced the vicious influence of special favors and the spirit of selfishness and greed that they have developed among the people of America. Without indulging in epithets, without indicting individuals, without adding to the noisy and acrimonious quarrel between men and factions, but without timidity or uncertainty, he steered his straight course to justice and right.

The audience was worthy of the occasion of the great address. More than 6,000 Democrats, a vast majority of them his personal friends and neighbors, but including in the number representatives of every state in the Union, gathered about the veranda of the aptly named "Little White House." All day long they had poured in by train loads, until the spacious lawn, sheltered by spreading elms and poplars, and the great common beyond, were filled to overflowing.

All Welcome Without Distinction

Absolute simplicity and perfect democracy had been decreed by the candidate as the rule of the day, and, as a result, there was only one spot on all the grounds that was safe from intrusion, the roped inclosure within which were grouped the members of the Notification Committee and the newspaper men. Even the porches and steps were given over to the crowd without distinction as soon as the guests of honor had been provided with places close about the speakers' chairs.

A Man and His Money

Any one who likes a brisk story, teeming with interest; a rollicking story filled with salient humor; an adventure story which will quicken the pulse without being ghastly; a love story which contains no mock sentiment or a mystery story which does not give itself away until the proper moment arrives, will welcome "A Man and His Money." It contains all of these elements in the correct proportion, and is calculated to provide diverting entertainment for every one.

Finding himself penniless in New York, a young man who has been reared in luxury, answers a newspaper advertisement. He hopes to find some work which will keep him from starvation and, perhaps, give him a new start in life. He discovers that he is to become the caretaker of the pampered canines of an eccentric lady of wealth. He also discovers that this lady is the aunt of Betty Dalrymple, the sweetheart of his prosperous days, whose miniature he carries in a pocket next to his heart. Betty has good reason to believe him a thief, and scorns him accordingly. Then there is a Russian Prince, whose name has been linked with Betty's in the society papers and whose idea of chivalry is similar to that of the ancient cave man. Betty refuses to marry the prince, is abducted by him, placed aboard his private yacht and a voyage to Russia is begun.

The dog tender surmises the plot and gives chase. He is suspected of being connected with it and consequently becomes a fugitive himself. After many exciting escapades he succeeds in boarding the yacht and the real action begins. Wits are matched against wits; there are plots and counter plots; strategy is resorted to, and the hero—all the time known as Horation Heatherbloom, the dog valet—finally rescues Betty. In a way which is entirely unusual he proves that he is not the thief Betty has believed him to be, but a true hero in more ways than one.

Such are some of the things which go into the making of "A Man and His Money," Frederic Isham's new novel.

The note of mystery is sounded in the first page and is sustained until the very last, and the reader is kept breathless with suspense and expectation. The love element is powerful and appealing and reaches a conclusion so entirely satisfactory that it leaves a delightful memory after the story has been finished.

"A Man and His Money" is to be published serially in the Daily Edition of The Pittsburgh Dispatch, beginning Thursday, August 15.

You will miss the best story of the year if you do not read it. Notify your newsdealer now to serve you with The Dispatch commencing with the opening chapters.

Fame and Sorrow

You climb steep hills and thorn-lined ways
To reach success and win your fame;
And yet you grieve, despite earth's praise,
Its empty breath uplifts your name.
The one you thought and loved the best
Lies sleeping,—violets on her breast.

The Proposed Debate

A Story For College Commencement

By LUCIA D. W. REDFIELD

In New England there are two colleges within a few miles of each other, the one founded by Ebenezer Black for young men, the other by Arietta White for women, the former being known as Black and the latter as White college. At the approach of the June graduation exercises, in view of the interest taken in Europe and America in the votes for women question, some one proposed that a debate upon the topic, "Resolved, that the vote be given to women," take place as one of the features of commencement, the Black students to defend the negative and the Whites the affirmative. A challenge was forwarded by the students of White to the students of Black. It was accepted, and committees were appointed in each college to select its representative disputants and to arrange the terms.

It was feared that men judges would award the victory to men and women to women. Therefore a compromise was effected by leaving the decision to the audience, no student being allowed to vote. This was a point gained by the women, for the majority of those attending such exhibitions are usually of that sex. Recognizing this advantage of their opponents, the men students selected their handsomest and most winning speakers instead of those capable of bringing forward the best arguments. The committee of White students, hearing of this, relegated to the background any candidate who was not attractive. The consequence was that the most engaging men and women in either college were appointed disputants, while those whose recommendations were intellect alone were passed over as unavailable.

In this wicked world when a question of importance comes up for settlement, instead of each side making an honest endeavor to decide right, chicanery is resorted to in order to secure an advantage. John Markley, a senior, was made manager of the Black debating team and Drucilla Spanker manager of the White team. Markley had a sister in White, and Miss Spanker had a brother in Black. Markley laid out the campaign in this wise: He would instruct his debaters to contrive to exhibit the unfitness of women to vote by bringing into the debate political questions upon which they must necessarily show their ignorance. The tariff, the initiative, the referendum, the recall, were to be fired at the girls with confusing rapidity. If this did not produce a panic the "reasonableness" of a recent decision of the United States supreme court was to be sent in like a charge of cavalry to turn the enemy's right.

Possibly a victory might have been gained in this way had not the manager of the women's team induced Miss Emma Markley to make a foray into her brother's room when the two were at home for the spring recess in search of information of the enemy's plans. She discovered a list of those brain splitting questions in his pocket. The result was that a copy was given to the debaters for the purpose of "boning up" on the problems.

Meanwhile Ned Spanker was spying on his sister with a view to securing points in the program of the women's team. Unfortunately for him, his talent for spying was not up to his sister's, and he made poor headway. He asked her leading questions, the only reply to which was a wry face and "Don't you wish you knew?" John Markley, who had suggested the move, received Ned's report with misgivings. He recognized the fact of woman's superiority in a game of duplicity. He called a conference of his team, and an all night discussion as to what was to be done took place, which resulted in a proposal for a conference between the teams with a view to establishing certain rules by which both should be guided during the debate.

The two teams met on the campus of White college on the first Saturday afternoon in May. The spring had come on, the day was delightful, and both men and women, especially the latter, were dressed becomingly. From their immaculate appearance and the deferential bearing of the men they would never have been taken for those about to engage in hostilities of any kind. Rules were proposed and discussed, the men gallantly giving way to the women on all points.

Unfortunately a bit of an affair had been going on between one of the girls debaters, Miss Maud Jennings, and Mr. Dick Turner. Miss Jennings said that she had a proposition to make which she preferred to sound one of the men upon and invited Mr. Turner to stroll off toward the chapel for the purpose. Mr. Fred Howard declared that he wished to consult Miss Belle Opton upon an important matter concerning the coming debate, and they took the path toward the astronomical observatory. Mr. Edward Parker and Miss Della Storms departed in the direction of the library, while Joe Winchester and Marian Thorne proceeded in the direction of the laboratory. This left Archie Tucker and Grace Smith sole occupants of the campus, and they might consult on any subject they pleased without being overheard. But the position was exposed, and they disappeared with the rest. This effected a sine die adjournment of the conference since none of the strollers returned until that hour when the young ladies were expected to seek the seclusion of their rooms for study. No business having been transacted, it was thought best to call another meeting on the following Saturday. This occasion was marked by the attendance of Professor Virginia Olcott, aged fifty-five and with little or no sympathy with the foibles of youth. All the necessary business was transacted, but one of the men proposed that they meet the next Saturday afternoon for further conference. Professor Olcott declared that further meetings were not necessary, and the faculty would not permit any more of them.

Professor Olcott made a mistake in not attending the first meeting. During that conference, which had resolved itself into five separate consultations, one engagement had taken place, two actual love affairs had been started and one mild flirtation indulged in. The only couple between whom nothing unusual took place were Mr. Tucker and Miss Smith, who had been engaged before either of them had entered college. There were no more meetings between the debaters, but a great many couple meetings of which neither Professor Olcott nor any other member of the faculty was aware.

A week before the proposed debate Mr. John Markley called on Miss Emma Spanker and announced that he feared the feature which had been relied upon to give such eclat to the commencement exercises would fall through. He had received a note from one of his team announcing his engagement to one of the White team and his conversion to the votes for women cause. Another member had told him that he didn't give a tinker's cuss if every woman in Europe, Asia, Africa and America had a vote. This debater confidentially announced that he had met the jolliest girl in Christendom on the opposing team, and he would not only give her his vote, but his head, too, if she wanted it. Thus far he had bestowed upon her ten pounds of candy.

Miss Spanker was surprised at this information because she had met with the same experience in her own team. One of her debaters, who had been detected smuggling flowers to her room, had resigned from the team, stating that she hadn't the slightest use for a vote. If she had one she wouldn't know what to do with it unless she gave it to an awfully nice fellow, who would do her voting for her soon after she had been graduated. Another had admitted that she had lost interest in the subject, while a third renegade to her sex declared that no woman could be driven to the polls past a department store in which a bargain sale was in progress.

A mutual disappointment brought about a mutual sympathy. Mr. Markley was one of Black's most prominent undergraduates, and Miss Spanker was a young lady of great refinement. They said nothing of her comeliness. They held several protracted meetings and at the end of every meeting were far nearer being in love with each other than with the subject that brought them together.

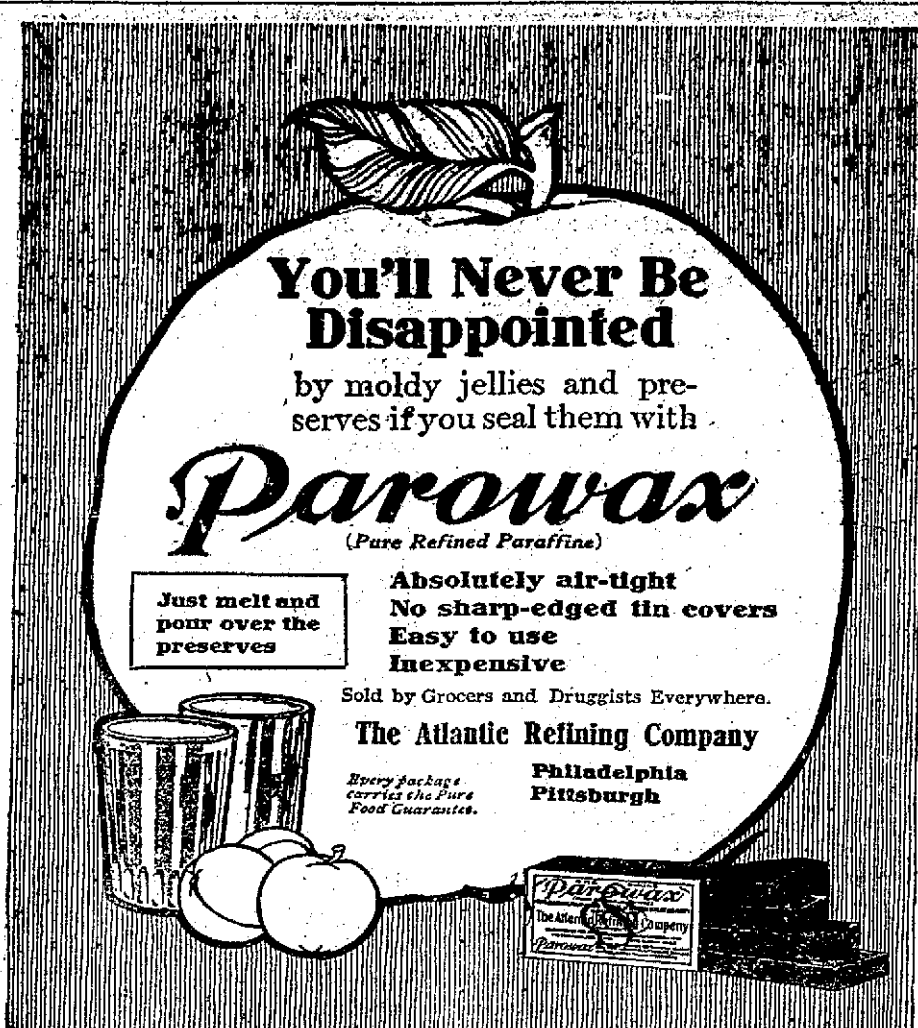

The arrangements for the debate were now in such an unsatisfactory state that the condition came to the ears of Professor of Elocution Atwood in Black college, to whose department it belonged. He sought Professor Cummings of the corresponding department in White, and the two put their heads together with a view to seeing what could be done to save the debate from falling through.

But bad luck seemed to attend the movement from the first. Everybody knows that spring is the season for love, and this spring seemed to be especially adapted for the purpose in that vicinity. Professor Atwood was a bachelor and Professor Cummings a maid. The result of their putting their heads together was not conducive to a solution of the problem.

Several students of White college the day before the one appointed for the debate got together to insure its coming off as announced. These young ladies were of a very different type from those who had thus far had the matter in charge, taking a real interest in the subject to be debated. They solved the problem at once, so far as White college was concerned, by appointing a real capable substitute for each and every woman debater. These substitutes were not endowed with beauty of face or figure; they were intellectuals, standing high in their classes and in every way fitted to represent it in any capacity.

When the day and hour for the debate arrived the hall in which it was to take place was crowded. On the platform sat the substitutes, but not an original appointee appeared. The manager of the men's team walked forward and announced that there was no necessity for a debate on the question so far as his college was concerned since every man appointed to argue against woman's voting had from the first shown a marked indifference in the matter and finally backed out from serving as a debater. He had called for substitutes, but none had volunteered. One thing had been demonstrated—that the students of Black college were not so ungallant as to argue on the negative side of the question "Shall women be given the vote?" He regretted that the audience should be disappointed, but that could not be helped.

The audience then strolled out to the campus. There was much individual comment expressed, but on another matter than the debate that had not come off. It was concerning the number of engagements that had been the only result of the proposed discussion.

Lesson VI.—Third Quarter, For
Aug. 11, 1912.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Mark iv, 35, to v, 20.
Memory Verses, 38, 39—Golden Text,
Ps. xlvii, 1, 2 (R. V.).—Commentary
Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

It comes to me as I begin to write this lesson that we should always see Jesus in His life on earth among men as God manifest in the flesh, revealing God to us, that we may know Him personally and trust Him and let Him live in us, that others may know Him, for the poor world knoweth Him not. We must also recognize always a great adversary, the devil, who hates God and man and would kill God if he could and take His throne. He would keep men in ignorance of God and of Christ and possess them for his own ends and turn them against God. He has great power with God's permission and will exert it to the full against God before he is finally overthrown. In the two portions of today's lesson we see the Son of God crossing the sea of Galilee to deliver a man (or, according to Matthew, two men) from the power of the devil, and on the way it seems as if a great storm would sink the boat and drown all who were in it. Did the devil know that he was about to lose a bit of his property, and did he seek by that storm to kill Christ and His disciples? Let those tell who know more than I do, but this we do know—that he tried to kill Him as a babe in Bethlehem and finally did kill Him by the Jewish rulers at the hands of the Romans. Thank God He is risen from the dead; is alive forevermore, is at the right hand of the majesty on high, has all power in heaven and on earth and is waiting His time to put the devil in the bottomless pit and set up a kingdom of peace and righteousness on earth.

In this great storm on Galilee see Him peacefully sleeping on a pillow in the hinder part of the ship, though the waves beat into the ship and it was full of water, and recognize in Him a weary man, a real man, partaker of flesh and blood, but without sin, and rejoice that we have a High Priest who is touched with the feeling of our infirmities (Heb. ii, 14; iv, 15). He is in the midst of trouble, as the disciples see it, and yet He is not troubled. And on the last night before His crucifixion He said to His disciples, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but in Me peace; let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John xvi, 33; xiv, 27). When one was discoursing on the teaching of Christ a man who had never before heard such teaching said, "Beautiful, beautiful, but can you do it?" Jesus Himself could do it, and He did it. He always did what He taught (Acts i, 1). The ship could not sink, neither could the disciples perish, with Christ in their midst, but they did not know Him and were therefore filled with fear. They awoke Him with the cry "Lord, save us!" and with the question "Master, carest Thou not that we perish?" His reply was: "Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Where is your faith?" (Matt. viii, 26; Luke xii, 25). They were troubled by what they saw. Faith endures by seeing the invisible. We are expected to walk by faith, not by sight (II Cor. v, 7). He rebuked the wind and the raging of the sea and said, "Peace, be still," and there was a great calm (verse 30; Luke viii, 24). The rebuking, compared with Zech. iii, 2, and Jude 9, leads me to believe that the person referred to in those passages had something to do with this storm. As the disciples saw the power of His word they feared and wondered and said, "What manner of man is this that even the wind and the sea obey Him?" Our hearts exultingly cry, "Jesus is God!" The perfect man a little while ago so peacefully asleep has power over wind and sea and all the elements. He it is who walked in the furnace with Daniel's friends and quenched the violence of fire and spent the night with Daniel and shut the lions' mouths. To know Him is peace at all times.

Now see Him meeting the tempest tossed man of Gadara, possessed by a legion of demons, a naked wild man, exceeding fierce, whom no one could bind or tame, for he broke all chains and fetters, and all men were afraid of him. The poor demoniac seems to long for deliverance, for he ran to Jesus, as if he knew that He could deliver him, but the demons are strong within him. They knew Jesus and called Him Son of the Most High God (verse 7). They knew the doom that awaited them and ask, "Art thou come hither to torment us before the time?" (Matt. viii, 29). They knew of the place prepared for them and beg not to be sent to the abyss or bottomless pit (Luke viii, 31, R. V.). There is such a place, and there is a place called the lake of fire, everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels (Rev. xx, 14, 15; Matt. xxv, 41). All who deny this or make light of it are not for the time controlled by the spirit of truth. Although there were so many demons in the man, they are spoken of as one, for Jesus said, "Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit" (verse 8), and, having received permission, they went into the swine, and the whole herd, about 2,000, were drowned in the sea. Behold the change in the man who had been the terror of the neighborhood! See him clothed and in his right mind and longing to stay with Jesus.

The Coughs of Children

They may not cough today, but what about tomorrow? Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. This cough medicine is especially good for children. No anodynes. No alcohol.

Many a child is called dull and stupid when the whole trouble is due to a lazy liver. We firmly believe your own doctor will tell you that an occasional dose of Ayer's Pills, sugar-coated, will do such children a great deal of good. Ask him.

A LITERARY RIDDLE.

Who Was It Wrote the Tragedy of "Troilus and Cressida?"

Andrew Lang has just propounded a puzzle in circumstantial evidence. "Who," he asks, "wrote 'Troilus and Cressida'?" You may answer, as you please, Shakespeare or Bacon. If you answer Bacon, Andrew Lang comes back with the query, "Would Bacon have said that Aristotle lived before the Trojan war?" Bacon was too learned a man to make such a mistake, which would be as bad as placing Abraham Lincoln among the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

If you answer Shakespeare, Andrew Lang shoots another query at you: "The author makes 'Ulysses' and 'Achilles' quote an author, and discuss a pretty long and strange passage from that author, who was Plato. How could Shakespeare have read Plato?" For Shakespeare knew no Greek, and in his day Plato had not yet been translated into English.

It is quite conceivable that Shakespeare might imagine that Plato and Aristotle lived many centuries before Homer, but it is inconceivable that the erudite Bacon should fall into such an error.

Andrew Lang does not pretend to solve the riddle. He frankly says, "I give it up."—New York World.

RISKY POSTAL SERVICE.

In Russia the Government Opens All Suspicious Packages.

Our own service of mails is well organized. There is little doubt in the mind of the average person that when he posts a letter it will reach its destination.

But in other lands he might well fear for its safety. In Russia, for instance, any letter or parcel that is regarded with suspicion is immediately opened and its contents noted. A clever machine gums it up again, so that the recipient does not know that it has been tampered with.

In Lapland the mails are carried in sledges drawn by reindeers. In the wilds of the Caucasus the postman holds a post of danger. He must be protected against brigands and against the weather, for he often has to climb mountains more than 12,000 feet high.

Asiatic Russia, which is apt to be marshy, has the buffalo post, and, of course, the progress made is very slow. Buffaloes are more powerful than oxen, and they are also used in Siberia for carrying the mail.

Other postmen in foreign lands are the swimming postman of India and the sliding letter carrier of the Andes. For the latter place the Argentine government specially imports Norwegians.—Exchange

Mexico's Smoking Mountain.

In 1897 I climbed two volcanoes in Mexico, Popocatepetl, or "the smoking mountain," about 17,800 feet, and Orizaba, the former the most famous because within view from Mexico City and thus a source of especial pride and admiration to the inhabitants, who have been loath to believe that any other of their mountains could be higher. Popo has a really splendid crater, about half a mile across and 1,000 feet deep. The walls are generally vertical, but in one or two places it is possible to descend. When workers are engaged in collecting sulphur machinery is used to hoist them up and down. From Popo's summit there is a glorious prospect, not alone of the immense crater, but of the beautiful "White Lady" (Iztaccihuatl) reclining a thousand feet below, of Orizaba on the far horizon and of the charming valley of Mexico.—Annie S. Peck in Christian Herald.

Wellington's Integrity.

The Duke of Wellington was noted for his rigid integrity. Here is an instance which occurred in reference to his large estate. Some farm adjoining his lands was for sale, and his agent negotiated for him for the purchase. Having concluded the business, he went to the duke and told him he had made a capital bargain. "What do you mean?" asked the duke. "Why your grace, I have got the farm for so much, and I know it to be worth at least so much more." "Are you quite sure of that?" "Quite sure, your grace, for I have carefully surveyed it." "Very well, then; pay the gentleman from me the balance between what you have already given and the real value of the estate."

RIVERSIDE, PA.
CORRESPONDENCE SOLICITED

[These articles and illustrations must not be reprinted without special permission.]

THE FARMER'S INSTITUTE AND POULTRY CULTURE.

When corn reached 3,125,713,000 bushels the huskers in the corn belt sang, "Corn is king!" But our billion dollar Biddy is chasing the corn, and if poultry got a true census the song would be from sea to sea:

The old farm hen now on the top perch hops.
In Uncle Sam's dominion she's the leader of all crops.
She's not so very stylish, but she gets there just the same,
And you bet she's the top liner in the nation's Hall of Fame!

Listen!
Eighty-eight per cent, or 5,655,754 United States farms, report 488,468.

HON. A. L. MARTIN, DEPUTY SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE AND DIRECTOR OF INSTITUTES, PENNSYLVANIA.

354 fowls, an increase over 1899 of $65,000,000.

Chickens jumped from 23,566,921 to 280,345,133, an advance of 256,778,212, while eggs went from 1,293,622,433 dozens to 1,591,311,371, an increase of 297,688,938 dozens, and the value of eggs advanced 112.6 per cent.

Pity the last census didn't cover the whole poultry industry!

A true census will show Biddy above them all, and all credit to the factors that put her there. Prominent among these is the farmers' institute. Pennsylvania's poultry has advanced 71 per cent in value, chiefly through this agency, the director of institutes.

Hon. A. L. Martin, being an energetic promoter of advanced poultry culture. Poultry products mainly come from the farms, and the farms in each state are under the care of the state departments of agriculture, and these departments have organized the farmers' institutes, where experts meet the farmer face to face, solve his problems and furnish him practical information on the different phases of modern scientific agriculture.

Such instruction meets local conditions and hits the bullseye. The farm home, the farm school, the farm church and the farm crops have received an uplift thereby, and thus this nation is not only the workshop of the world, but the ne plus ultra in agriculture.

Poultry and the staples reach $5,000,000,000 per year, and much of the improvement in quality and quantity is due to the farmers' institute.

Poultry looms so big, pays so well, cuts such a figure on the national bill of fare that it has become a feature at institutes, and it is the aim to secure authorities to lecture on poultry topics.

Hence experts, famous the country over, are engaged in this work for the advancement of practical poultry husbandry.

Our readers should attend and profit from the instruction of these men who have made good. Yes; all should encourage an institution that is not only promoting poultry culture, but advancing the great cause of agriculture in general, for agriculture is the keystone of our national prosperity and the bedrock of the welfare of the race.

DON'TS.

Don't feed ground grain that has caked in the hoppers. It's rash to feed moldy mash.

Don't buy ready made what you can build yourself. You mustn't slave, but you must save.

Don't be convinced too easily. If you haven't a mind of your own your wife will give you a piece of hers.

Don't dry clover, for the hens like hay. Almost dry, put in sacks and hang away.

Don't knock against paying taxes on waste land when geese will fertilize it and bring a big profit.

Don't let the sun go down on your wrath. There will be an aftermath.

FIRE DANGER AT SEA.

How Flames Can Sweep the Inside of Even a Metal Ship.

The danger from fire on a transatlantic liner is more serious than is generally believed. It is much greater than the danger from collision and is becoming more and more dangerous with the increased outlay upon luxury and display. The main structure of the ship and most of its essential parts are of metal, but many of the fittings, nearly every feature of ornament and every trapping of luxury, are highly inflammable.

No one who has not been aboard the Spanish wrecks at Santiago can conceive how fire can sweep the inside of even a metal ship. Admiral Cervera described to me the experience on board the Teresa in these words: "The second shot that came on board set us on fire. The fire main was damaged. Soon we were unable to cope with the fire. It swept through her from bow to stern. There was not a space as big as the palm of your hand where life could have been sustained. An insect could not have lived on board. We had to get overboard or be burned."

It is true the Spaniards had not cut out their woodwork and thrown overboard all unnecessary inflammables, as we had in the American fleet, but the inflammability of one of their warships was much less than that of a luxurious ocean liner.—Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson in Engineering Magazine.

PINEAPPLE PLANTS.

They Do Not Die After Fruiting, but Reproduce Themselves.

Pineapples do not grow on trees. Imagine a plant four feet in extreme height from the ground to the tip of leaves, a single stalk at the surface, but dividing at once into swordlike blades or leaves, fifteen in number, from the center of which appears a stiff, upright stem, at the top of which is the fruit. This stem is short, and the crown of the fruit when fully grown is a foot or more below the points of the leaves.

At the end of a year and a half from planting each plant produces a single fruit, even as a cabbage plant produces a single head. But the pineapple does not die after fruiting once. Down on the stem below the fruit and among the long, narrow leaves a sucker appears. If allowed to remain this will soon become the head of the plant, and within another year it will yield another fruit. This process may go on for a term of years. In the meantime, however, other suckers will make their appearance.

These are broken off, and when stuck into the ground they put out roots and become other plants. Thus a single pineapple plant may produce a dozen or more others while it is yielding fruit from year to year.

The Intruder.

A certain boat coming up the Mississippi one day during a flood lost her way and bumped up against a frame house. She hadn't more than touched it before an old darky ramed his head up through a hole in the roof, where the chimney once came out, and yelled at the captain on the roof: "Whar's you gwine wid dat boat? Can't you see nothin'?" Fust thing you knows you gwine to turn dis house ober, spill de old woman an' de chil'en out in de flood an' drown 'em. What you doin' out here in de country wid your boat, anyhow? Go on back yan der froo de co'nfields an' get back into de ribber whar you b'longs. Ain't got no business se'n miles out in de country foolin' re'un' people's houses nohow!" And the boat backed out.—Life.

The Largest Described Snake.

Speke in his narrative of the journey to the source of the Nile describes the largest snake that has ever been seen by man. "I shuddered," he says, "as I looked upon the effects of his tremendous dying strength. For yards around where he lay grass, bushes and saplings—in fact, everything except full grown trees—were cut clean off as if they had been trimmed with an immense scythe. The monster when measured was fifty-one feet two and one-half inches in extreme length, while around the thickest portions of its body the girth was nearly three feet."

Looking Ahead.

It was the first night of a new play. "I say," remarked the author to the manager, "that scene shifter over there is a most peculiar looking fellow."

"Yes; he's an Eskimo," said the manager.

"An Eskimo! What on earth made you take him on?"

"Oh, I thought it would be a comfort to see one happy face if the play turns out to be a frost!"

Cases in Point.

Rivers—Brooks, that's the second time I've heard you use the phrase "aching void." I wish you would tell me how a void can ache.

Brooks—Well, not to speak of a hot low tooth, don't you sometimes have a headache? London Telegraph

PAPER BAG COOKING

Great System Perfected by M. Soyer, Famous London Chef.

GOOD THINGS FOR HUSBAND'S CRONIES.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

Man's part at home is to endure all things and eat all things, smiling as though he liked it all, whatever the facts in the case may be. And most men, I believe, nobly fill the part. Therefore, it seems to me fitting that every once in a while they should be given, by way of reward, a supremely masculine evening, whereat it is understood that woman's part is to stand in wait and supply the good things to eat—good things that have been cooked to perfection in paper bags.

As to the nature of the evening, let the man himself decide.

Many things heretofore described in this column suit such festive occasions. Savory mouthfuls, hot chicken biscuits, hot oyster sandwiches, paper-bagged oysters either in shells after Soyer's recipe, or cooked in quantity with butter, cream and lemon juice and their own liquor added later—they all will satisfy hungry souls and whet the palate for things potable, especially if supplemented with cheese crackers, also hot, salted nuts of any sort, olives warmed in a very little sherry, or crisp radishes and invariably good sharp cucumber pickle.

Sliced beef crisped is not to be despised, especially if the man of the house has a weakness for ale or 'alf-and-'alf. To go with it make prickled biscuit; none you can buy will match them. The foundation is puff paste, and do not spare either shortening or work in its making. Put in a trifle more salt than for pastry uses, roll out less than a quarter inch thick, and cut in rounds two and a half inches across. Prick them well over and bake crisp in a well buttered bag. Sprinkle about half of them before baking lightly with dry mustard or black pepper and paprika, or even the barest dusting of cayenne. Keep these seasoned biscuit separate from the plain ones and serve on separate plates. Instead of the mustard and pepper, you can use finely grated cheese, or lay a very thin slice of cheese between two biscuit after baking and heat in a bag until the cheese melts. Pimento cheese spread between such biscuit, which have been very lightly buttered, also makes a well flavored mouthful.

Raisins cut very small, mixed with sharp cucumber pickle, also cut very fine, and worked smoothly through the best cream cheese with a very little French dressing or else a bare dusting of black pepper make a novel and appetizing filling for these biscuit sandwiches. You can split the biscuit, or make them very thin, butter the under one on top, and bake them together. The baking can be done in the afternoon and the biscuit heated before filling them with the ready prepared filling.

Serve all things from a buffet, even if you must improvise it, by up-ending a dry goods box and covering it with a cloth. Set things on it, and let the eaters wait upon themselves, yourself discreetly withdrawing, but remaining within call, so as to renew supplies at need. When the hot things have been duly eaten, the cold ones duly drank, and the serious business of the assemblage is again under way, as unobtrusively as possible refill the buffet with platters of sliced cake, all sorts at hand, tarts, turnovers—all manner of good things, indeed, your pantry or your cake box can furnish forth. With these supply fresh potables—the sort depending on the individual taste and purse.

FINE FISH AND FRESH.

By Nicolas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Herring à la Russe: Take four very soft-roed herrings. Get the fish monger to bone them for you. In the center of each place a big teaspoonful of French mustard and a bit of butter. Dust lightly with black pepper and put in a well buttered bag. Add to them half a wineglassful of either hock or sherry and half a wineglassful of either shallot or tarragon vinegar, as preferred. Cook for fifteen to eighteen minutes, according to the thickness of the fish, in a moderately hot oven. Dish up on a hot dish and serve with a beet salad. This is a most appetizing way of cooking herrings, but must be done in the bag if it is to be done to perfection.

Smelts Milanalee: Clean a dozen smelts, roll them in flour. Put an ounce of butter in a very hot dish, let it melt, roll the fish in this butter, sprinkle with a little cayenne pepper and a little grated Parmesan, and place them side by side in a well buttered paper bag. Cover lightly with bread crumbs and pour a little tomato sauce over each smelt. Seal up and cook for eight minutes in a very hot oven. Serve with slices of lemon.

Fresh Herring: Split the fish on each side in a horizontal direction. Place on it a little mace, bay leaves, parsley, a small piece of onion and some salt and pepper. Add two table-spoonfuls of vinegar. Place in a paper bag, seal up, put on the broiler in a moderate oven for twenty minutes.

THE SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

Do not sap the springs of life by neglect of the human mechanism, by allowing the accumulation of poisons in the system. An imitation of Nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous strength is to take an alterative glyceric extract (without alcohol) of Golden Seal and Oregon grape root, Bloodroot, Stone and Mandrake root with Cherrybark. Over 40 years ago Dr. Pierce gave to the public this remedy, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. He found it would help the blood in taking up the proper elements from food, help the liver into activity, thereby throwing out the poisons from the blood and vitalizing the whole system as well as allaying and soothing a cough.

No one ever takes cold unless constipated, or exhausted, and having what we call mal-nutrition, which is attended with impoverished blood and exhaustion of nerve force. The "Discovery" is an all-round tonic which restores tone to the blood, nerves and heart by imitating Nature's methods of restoring waste of tissue, and feeding the nerves, heart and lungs on rich red blood.

"I suffered from pain under my right shoulder blade also a very severe cough," writes Mrs. W. Dorn, of New Brookland, S. C., to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Little Rock, N. Y. "I had four different doctors and none did me any good. Some said I had consumption, others said I would have to have an operation. I was bedridden, unable to sit up for six months—and was not at all but a live skeleton. You advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When I had taken one bottle of the 'Discovery' I could sit up for an hour at a time, and when I had taken three bottles I could do my own washing and tend to the children. I took fourteen bottles in all and was then in good health. My weight is now 167 pounds."

We are told that in Venice originated the custom of giving favors to guests. Henry III. attended a sugar banquet in the doge's palace where plates, cups and even napkins were formed from sugar, and 300 spun sugar effigies were given to the ladies. This dinner of state lasted three hours, and King Henry brought with him his own bottle, who presided over the wines.
